Biographical Note: The Townsend/Townshend family traces its roots in the new world to Thomas Townsend, a Puritan, who emigrated from England to Lynn in the colony of Massachusetts Bay about 1637, and in old England to the time of William the Conqueror. The family name has gone through many changes from the original Norman "de Hauteville" as shown in Charles Hervey Townshend's book The Townshend Family of Lynn in Old and New England. As a result of his genealogical research for this book Captain Townshend became convinced that the older and English spelling with an "h" was preferable and that spelling has been used since then by the New Haven branch. However it does not appear to have been adopted by other branches in the United States. In this collection the name has been spelled in the following ways: Townsend, Townshend, Towneshend, Towneshende and Townesend.

Charles Hervey Townshend (1833-1904) was born in the family country home on the eastern shore of New Haven Harbor. At the tender age of fifteen he went to sea as a cabin boy; became Master of his first ship BAVARIA when he was only twenty-three years old; and retired in 1871 after a remarkable twenty-three year sailing career which included the transition from sail to steam. In that time he had never lost a vessel or sustained serious damage at sea. The story of his years as a sailor is told in Captain Charles Hervey Townshend, Self-Portrait of an American Packet Ship Sailor, published by the Marine Historical Association, Mystic, Connecticut, 1940. After his retirement he devoted much of his time to genealogical and historical research; for a complete list of his books and articles see Appendix I of that publication. His correspondence, notes and copies of ancient documents and records made during the course of his research comprise the bulk of the collection. Jeremiah Townsend (1711-1802) and his brother Ebenezer (1716-1775), great-grandsons of Thomas the Puritan, were the first Townsends to come to New Haven in 1739. Since that time the family has played an important role in New Haven history and economy. For a detailed history of the family in the New Haven area see Townshend Heritage by Doris B. Townshend, published by the New Haven Colony Historical Society in 1971.

Analysis: The collection consists of five boxes and three oversize items. The bulk of the collection is composed of the papers of Captain Charles Hervey Townshend which he accumulated during his genealogical research in England and America. There are numerous handwritten copies of ancient documents in England, some in Latin with translation. Unless otherwise indicated, these documents and old records are copies. Since most of these copies were made more than a century ago some are very brittle, though quite legible. There are also copies of church and legal records from New England, with extensive notes in Captain Townshend's handwriting. These copies contain more than one type of document in many cases and span varied dates.

Material for Captain Townshend's publication The Townshend Family of Lynn in Old and New England, with copies of each revision, and drafts and uncut copies of his book Raynham are included. Members of other branches of the family in the United States also published genealogical books and pamphlets which are included.

The oldest documents in the collection are three Nathanael Ames Almanacs kept as personal diaries by Reverend Jonathan Townsend II, b.1721, for the years 1741, 1751 and 1754, and his record book entitled An Account of the Births, Deaths, and Marriages within the Town of Medfield from October 1745 (to 1757). The most recent documents are the correspondence and notes of Henry Hotchkiss Townshend, Sr. (1874-1953) from 1948 to 1952.

Captain Townshend collected extensive material regarding other branches of the family in the United States consisting of correspondence, notes, Pedigree charts and newspaper clippings. This material is filed alphabetically by the name of the town or state. There are numerous newspaper clippings, especially for the Oyster Bay, Long Island, branch. Some of these newspaper articles contain information not found anywhere else in the collection, but are in extremely poor condition (some have crumbled beyond legibility.) The rest of the collection consists of miscellaneous correspondence, legal documents, accounts and business papers pertaining to other family members in the New Haven area, filed alphabetically by their first names. For further information and other papers of Charles Hervey Townshend see the Maritime Collection MSS No. 22.
