A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE UNITED CHURCH ON THE GREEN

The United Church on the Green has its origins in the Great Awakening of the eighteenth century. During the 1730's the evangelist, George Whitefield, visited the town of New Haven and after this there was much dissention within the Congregational Church. By the late 1730's a group following the "New Lights" within the New Haven church organized themselves and petitioned the church and the General Assembly for the right to become a separate religious body. Permission was granted and in 1742 New Haven's second Congregational Church, the White Haven Church and Society was formed.

The White Haven Society built its Meeting House on the corner of Church and Elm Streets and grew in membership over the next twenty years. In the 1760's a conflict arose within the Society over the engaging of a new pastor. A majority of individuals expressed strong interest in engaging Jonathan Edwards Jr., to be pastor however a vocal group of church members objected strongly to the hiring of Edwards. The reasons for this dislike of Edwards may have arisen from his rejection of the Half-way Covenant or from the fact that this group may have objected to his highly intellectual sermons which tended to be an hour to an hour and a half in length. Edwards was ordained as minister in 1769 and shortly after this the dissenters voted to leave the White Haven Church and form a separate society. In 1773 a Charter was granted by the General Assembly and the Fair Haven Society was officially recognized. The Fair Haven Society was also given permission to erect a Meeting House on the northeast corner of the Green (similar permission had been denied the White Haven Society) and by 1771 a useable building had been built.

During the late eighteenth century the membership of both societies had decreased and by the early 1790's both churches were without pastors and the possibility of unification was raised. After negotiations the reunion occurred on November 27th, 1796. The legal name of the new organization was The Church of Christ in the United Societies of White Haven and Fair Haven which was an indication of the fact that even after this move each society retained ownership of all property. In 1815 with the merger of the property of the two societies, the name was shortened to "The Church of Christ in the United Societies". During the greater part of the nineteenth century the church was popularly known as North Church due to the location of the Meeting House on the Green.

Another division within the United Church occurred in 1826, once again in a time of widespread religious upheaval. A group of prominent individuals from United Church and Center Church petitioned to leave and by early September 1826, twenty-nine individuals organized the Third Church. This organization had Meeting Houses at the corner of Chapel and Union Streets and later on Church Street opposite the lower Green. Third Church was divided in the late 1830's, the new congregation an antecedent to the present Church of the Redeemer. During the 1870's financial difficulties plagued many churches in New Haven and one way of dealing with these problems was unification of congregations. By December 1883 North Church had invited Third Church to join in a merger and the offer was accepted in early 1884. Both pastors resigned at the time of the merger, Third Church agreed to give up its property and the name of the new organization was known as The United Church.

The history of United Church on the Green has been marked by several long pastorates, generally liberal theological principles and progressive stands on social issues. The pastorate of Jonathan Edwards Jr. lasted twenty-six years from 1769-1795. Edwards was a supporter of the American Revolution, as were most of the members of his congregation which included Roger Sherman, and he was also involved in the American Anti-Slavery Society which was formed during the latter part of the eighteenth century. Another long tenure was that of Samuel Merwin who served from 1805 until 1831. Merwin through personal contact rather than preaching (he evidently was lacking in this respect) brought many people into the church during his ministry which covered the period of the Second Great Awakening. He also was a leader in the reform movements of the time, particularly in the formation of a Temperance Society in the city.

Samuel W.S. Dutton was pastor from 1838 until 1866 and it is interesting to note that the history of both Center Church and Third Church were also marked by the long pastorates of Leonard Bacon (1825-1866) and Elisha Lord Cleaveland (1833-1866) at the same period. Dutton is remembered for his activism in the anti-slavery movement and it was during his ministry that the Beecher Bible and Rifle Company was formed to fight the expansion of slavery into Kansas and it is also believed that his residence was a station on the Underground Railroad. In the late nineteenth century the church was led by Dr. Theodore T. Munger who was the first pastor of the newly organized United Church from 1885-1900. Munger was a supporter of missionary activity and also of overseas expansion by the United States. He was one of the first to try to reconcile the new advances in scientific thought which had occurred during the last half of the nineteenth century with religious thought and viewed them as complimentary. Munger is also credited with developing the concept of "The Municipal Church" as opposed to the tradition of a parish church.

During the twentieth century the longest pastorate was that of Richard H. Clapp. Mr. Clapp was minister from 1923 until 1947. During his tenure the church celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the unification with Third Church; the two hundred anniversary of the organization of the White Haven Society and the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the United Society.

During more recent years United Church has continued its involvement in civic affairs and its liberal theological tradition. When the Meeting House was rededicated after renovation in 1967 it was rededicated as an "Ecumenical Church." The church has been a leader in the Council of Churches and for the last few years in the formation and operation of the Downtown Cooperative Ministry. The United Church is also involved in various community agencies such as Christian Community Action, FISH, Churchess Against Poverty and the Urban League. At the same time through ties to the United Church of Christ on the Local, State, National and International levels the church is involved in a much wider ministry than that to the city of New Haven.

The United Church on the Green is an interesting Church with a long and remarkably consistent history. The records in this collection serve to relate part of that history. For a more thorough narrative of the history of The United Church on the Green the reader should consult History of the United Church by Mary Hewitt Mitchell published by The United Church, New Haven, Connecticut, 1942. Further sources of information may be found in the Appendices to the Table of Contents to the collection.
The collection of the United Church Papers was given to the New Haven Colony Historical Society over a period from 1958 to 1968. The papers had been stored at the church over the years and some were in the process of being discarded when the Church Archivist, Mrs. N. Burton Paradise, rescued them. The papers were then examined and packed in boxes, stored at the church for a while and then given to the Historical Society. A few of the papers were also donated to the libraries at Yale University and fifteen volumes of records were given to the State Library in Hartford (see Appendix I).

The bulk of the collection of the United Church Papers consists of a series of Annual Reports covering the period from 1796 to 1965 and the financial records covering the period 1799 to 1939. The reports are not continuous and vary in content. The late eighteenth and early nineteenth century reports are mostly financial statements; however the bulk of the nineteenth century material are fairly complete reports covering the major activities of the church. The records after 1900 are once again very haphazard and by no means complete. For the most part the records from the period after 1920 are few and widely scattered over the next forty-five years.

The financial records fall into three categories: bills and receipts; papers concerned with the sale, rental, or auction of pews (which was the major way of raising funds for the church until the early twentieth century); papers such as wills, deeds, stock transactions, etc. The major portion of this part of the collection does consist of bills and receipted bills from throughout the nineteenth century.

Church membership records covering the period from 1797 to 1923 are the next largest portion of the collection. This section consists of letters requesting dismissal from the United Church or letters brought to United Church by individuals wishing to transfer their church membership to the church. There are no ledgers included here, with the exception of one undated ledger which probably dates from the middle third of the nineteenth century. There are many letters concerned with either maintaining or terminating membership in the United Church from the period of the late nineteenth century. At this period of time a revision of the church catalogue was undertaken and evidently the clerk of the church sent letters of inquiry to various members of the church who had left the New Haven area. The letters found in this portion of the collection seem to be replies to this type of inquiry. The letters are interesting to read because many of the individuals had moved to the midwest or far west and the letters describe what these people are doing and in one case what life was like in the Dakota Territory.

The reports of various organizations within the church comprise another sizeable portion of the collection. These organizations are groups such as the Sunday School, The Men's Club, and various women's groups most of which were concerned primarily with missionary work of one sort or another.

When individuals joined the United Church they were committed to the "Watch and Care" of the church members. This concept found application in the organization of a Committee on Church Discipline. The purpose of this committee was to investigate accusations of improper behavior and if substance was found to the charges to confront the accused individual and try to convince the person to correct his or her behavior. Most of the records of these types of situations are from the first half of the nineteenth century and the offense found most often is that of public drunkenness or intemperance. There are instances of the church censuring or dismissing individuals from the church due to continued misbehavior or refusal to repent or admit improper behavior.

The records of the White Haven and the Fair Haven Churches are also part of this collection. These papers are filed separately due to the fact that they were the antecedents to the United Church. The records are general in nature however many of them are concerned with financial matters. Third Church Records are also included in the collection and are treated as a separate entity.

The remaining portion of the United Church papers are concerned with records of proceedings other than Annual Meetings; materials relating to clergymen (a few sermons are included here but the Historical Society also has a collection of sermons which are catalogued and arranged separately), materials such as correspondence or other papers of various laypersons of the church, and a series of ledgers recording such items as Income from Pew Rentals and Sunday School officers and members. A small collection of photographs and newspaper clippings are included here along with a sizeable number of assorted printed materials, mostly Sunday morning bulletins. There are also a number of papers which are either undated or unidentified or both. Some of these seem to date from the eighteenth century but the bulk are from the nineteenth century.

The organization of the United Church Papers was determined by the nature of the papers themselves rather than by the organization of the church as a corporate body. When the sorting of the papers was begun they were found to be organized after a fashion into the system outlined above and because the internal structure of the church has changed and evolved over the years it seemed best to let the papers themselves determine the structuring of the collection.

The cataloguing of the United Church Papers was begun on June 7, 1974 and completed November 1, 1974. Financial aid was given to the New Haven Historical Society by the United Church on the Green in order to make the project possible.
