VII. Biographical note: The New Haven Council of Churches was founded in 1935 with the union of an older council of churches organization and the New Haven Council of Religious Education. The older council had been formed in 1925 upon the dissolution of the Pastor's Union of New Haven.

In 1938, the Council described itself as "a delegated body representing ... churches and synagogues and religious organizations in greater New Haven joined together for the purpose of promoting the religious life of the community." Prior to the 1960s the Council's chief functions were to provide services to local churches with programs of religious education, evangelism, stewardship and youth work; to hold interdenominational services such as the Noonday Lenten Services; to help its members participate in service projects and relief operations; and to provide cooperative opportunities for use of the media and the press. The focus of the Council's activities expanded in the 1960s to fill the needs of people in the community beyond the membership of the Council congregations, e.g., the Hospital Chaplaincy program and Community Housing, Inc. In this decade the Council ceased to be just a coordinating organization and began to initiate programs dealing with social issues, e.g., its work during the May Day demonstrations in 1970.

The group, however, was beset by financial problems, and in 1971 it was forced to disband for a complexity of reasons, among them a growing diversity of interests between the urban churches and those in suburban areas.

VIII. Analysis: The collection, which is stored in 64 boxes, three half boxes and 12 oversize containers, includes the following groups of papers:

Financial & Administrative: check stubs, bank statements, bills, receipts, treasurers' reports, records of contributions, annual reports, and papers of the Board of Directors and the Executive Committee. Newsletters and other publications
Analysis - continued

Correspondence
Personnel Files

The collection has been dated from 1925 because financial and administrative records of the earlier council are included. The remaining documents are concerned with the newer organization and date from 1935 to 1971. Also available are bound volumes of records of interdenominational organizations in New Haven which predated the Council, beginning with the New Haven Christian Commission (1864-66) through the Pastor's Union of New Haven (1906-25).

Wherever possible, the documents and volumes are filed in chronological order within the above mentioned categories. Because of the size of the collection, an outline has been prepared indicating in which boxes each category of papers is stored. This should help the researcher find individual documents. See the outline and the Table of Contents for complete information on the material included in the collection.

The papers should be of interest to those seeking information on interdenominational organizations; their structure and functions; their religious and social concerns; and how these concerns and activities evolved throughout the years since the mid 19th century and most specifically, from 1935 to 1971.
