VIII. Analysis: The collection is arranged in four series: I Correspondence, II Personal Papers, III Deeds, Legal and Business Papers, IV Photographs.
    The Correspondence Series, the largest, is organized by the individual family member who originates or receives the bulk of the letters. The chief correspondents are: Amanda Munger Chittenden, Samuel Hosmer Chittenden, George Benjamin Chittenden, Kittie Delano Chittenden, Mira Spencer Delano, the Chittenden children and a few miscellaneous letters. The order within the personal categories is chronological by correspondent, and in Series II and III, chronological. Reference to the genealogical charts in the first folder of the collection, "Correspondence concerning the collection" will clarify confusion on family identities and relationships. Of the photographs, one, a tintype of George B. Chittenden is filed in the photography department for preservation.
    There is a W.H. Jackson photograph of George B. Chittenden in the collection.

Processed by:
William Chittenden (1594?-1660-1), one of the original settlers in Guilford in 1639, was also one of the group to buy from Uncas, the Mohegan, land east of the East River known after 1626 as Madison. The Chittenden Family Papers, 1785-1981, document the life of his descendent, Samuel Chittenden (1777-1846) and his wife, Amanda Kelsey (1784-1811) and chiefly the life of their second child, Samuel C. Chittenden (1811-1886), his wife, Amanda Anne Munger (1813-1901) and their descendent to three generations. Samuel C. Chittenden conducted a lumber business in Madison. He was also one of the original projectors and stockholders of the Shore Line Railroad. East River, a section of Madison which had its own post office until 1959, was the home of the Samuel C. Chittenden family. His sons, Samuel Hosmer Chittenden(1845-1909), and George Benjamin Chittenden (1849-1939) grew up in East River, received bachelors and civil engineering degrees from Yale and, as young men, practiced their profession in the opening of the West in the 1870's.

Sam worked in the Engineering Department of the Union Pacific Railroad from 1868-1875. Then he worked for the government in Alabama and Georgia from 1876 to 1879. Moving to Connecticut till 1881, one of his projects was erecting the Shore Line Railroad bridge over the Quinnipiac in Fair Haven. From 1882 to 1884 he joined his brother in mining in New Mexico and Arizona, and from 1884 to 1887 in the Chittenden Brothers Engineering Co. in contract work on the water system of Washington, D.C. This included work on a dam across the Potomac at Great Falls. His latter years were spent in East River where he was Town Clerk and Judge of Probate for fourteen years. He represented Madison in the State Senate 1899-1900 where he chaired the Committee on Humane Institutions. He never married.

After Yale in 1871 George worked for two years on the Coast Survey on a survey of New Haven Harbor. A copy of the Survey map marked "George B. Chittenden, Aide" is in the New Haven Colony Historical Society Library. In 1873 George joined the western survey expedition of Dr. Ferdinand Vandever Hayden (1829-1887). During the summers he surveyed and mapped areas of Colorado and in the winters worked in Washington with the survey drawing up reports of the summer's work. He was on familiar terms with many of the men who were later prominent in the U.S. Geological Survey which was formed in 1879, consolidating four separate survey expeditions. [A partial list is appended]. While in Washington he led a lively social life and his letters comment on political events such as the convention for women's suffrage led by Susan B. Anthony in 1875, and the Belknap scandal. On December 25, 1876 George married Ella Spencer Delano Kittie of Washington, daughter of James Smith Delano, Deputy Controller of the Treasury, and Elmira Spencer Delano. Their children were Mira (1879-1966) who married Morgan H. Bowman, Horace (1880-1965) who married Katharine Hastings and Marjorie Lee (1884-1981) who donated the collection to the New Haven Colony Historical Society shortly before she died. George B. Chittenden practiced engineering in Washington in association with his brother from 1878-1885. In 1885 he began a series of mining ventures in Arizona, some successful, some not. Among them were the general managership of the Saddle Mountain Mining Company in Christmas, Gila County, Arizona and in copper mining in Arizona from 1911 to 1920. When times were good the George B. Chittenden family bought a house, "The Heights", in the northern section of Washington. When mining reverses occurred they lived with Mira Spencer Delano in her house, Mt. Pleasant. There were also sojourns in the old family house in East River and parts of summers were always spent there.
MSS B 33 Chittenden Family Papers, 1785-1981

When any part of the family was in the west the correspondence between east and west branches was voluminous. George retired to his father's house in East River in 1920.

The Chittenden family were all interested in the East River Library Company organized in 1874. The Reading Room was largely built and endowed by Caroline Munger Washburn (1808-1892) and Horace Washburn (1801-1881). It was a community center as well as a library. Games, plays, parties, entertainments and meetings took place there. It appears frequently in George's letters to his mother.

Of the Munger family, George Munger (1781-1825) married Parnel Kelsey (1781-1860). She was the sister of Amanda Kelsey, wife of Samuel Chittenden and mother of Samuel C. Chittenden. Their children were George (1803-1882), Clarissa (1806-1889), Caroline (1808-1892) and Amanda. Clarissa married Milton Badger (1800-1873) and Caroline, Horace Washburn. George Munger was a successful portrait painter but he also taught school and in young adulthood made a wagon trip with goods to sell to Pittsburgh and down the Mississippi by keel boat to New Orleans. A journal of this trip is in the collection as are letters to his wife and a poem. Amanda Munger Chittenden was very close to her sisters, who, when they were not living in East River, visited frequently. The Washburn's house, "Wildwood" is mentioned often. Clarissa and Caroline were also noted artists, Clarissa for flower paintings and Caroline, for miniatures. The sisters also wrote poems and essays, some of which were published, and at one time started a magazine, The Lyceum Banner. Many examples of their writings are in the collection.

Washburn material in the collection consists of a manuscript journal, 1785-1799, by the young aspiring minister, Joseph Washburn, who was eventually called to Farmington, and manuscript writings by and about Elizur T. Washburn, and a manuscript geography of Farmington by Maria A. Washburn.

Although the letters from George B. Chittenden from the Hayden expedition in the West and Washington are of marked historical significance, it is the totality of this collection which is its greatest value. A closely knit family who often wrote to each other every day, who preserved letters and family documents, who were aware of their heritage and kept the manuscripts associated with it, have built over the generations a continuing history of a Connecticut shore line family.
