Donated by Wm. C. Celentano, Jr., 424 Elm Street, New Haven
William C. Celentano
Jan. 23, 1904 - Nov. 14, 1972 (p. i)

William C. Celentano, a native of New Haven and a product of its schools, achieved his boyhood ambition by becoming the 43rd mayor of New Haven in 1949.

His parents, Italian immigrants, owned a grocery store on Elm and Howe Streets, where Celentano helped out by delivering groceries. After graduating from Hillhouse, he attended the New York School of Embalming and started his own funeral home on Elm St. in 1926. Celentano was named to the Connecticut State Board of Examiners of Embalmers in the 1930's. He married Marion Piontek in 1934 and had one son, William C. Celentano, Jr. who followed his father in the undertaking business.

In 1925 Celentano won both the three-way Republican primary and the election for the aldermanic seat from the 21st Ward which he retained for 16 years until his election as mayor. In 1939 he made an unsuccessful bid for the mayoralty. In 1945 he defeated the incumbent John Murphy by a 6,000 vote majority ending 14 years of Democratic rule in the City. Celentano was New Haven's first Italian-American mayor and at 41 the youngest.

In 1947 Celentano was challenged by the Democratic candidate, Frank M. Anastasio, an Italian dentist and in 1949, 1951 and 1953 by Richard C. Lee. In 1951 Celentano won by a recount-vote of two and in 1953 lost in a three way election, with Alfred E. Tong running on the Socialist ticket, to R.C. Lee by 3,500 votes. During Lee's administration, Celentano was appointed chairman of the Commission on Equal Opportunity (CEO) in 1965 and reappointed to a three year term in 1966; however, he resigned shortly after for reasons of health. In the 1960's Celentano's name came up numerous times for Republican candidate both for lieutenant governor and mayor. Citing his health and family obligations Celentano declined the honors.

Celentano belonged to a number of professional, social and service clubs and fraternal organizations. In 1951 he was awarded the "Star of Italian Solidarity" by the Italian government.

Celentano's administration lacked the dramatic and spectacular upheavals that characterized the administration of his successor. It witnessed the City's transition from WWII austerity to prosperity and urban progress. Under Celentano's administration special emphasis was placed on the City school system. A survey (1945-1947) was conducted which recommended independence of education from politics, more professional leadership, and an extensive program of rebuilding and remodeling. On the basis of this survey and suggestions from the Citizens Advisory Committee, two new schools were constructed and a third was under construction in 1953; extensive repairs and remodeling of older schools was done; teachers' requirements were upgraded and their salaries increased.

Celentano's administration laid the foundation of present day New Haven. As State and Federal funding became available, the City turned its attention to the deteriorated neighborhoods, as Oak Street, and began work on the Connecticut Turnpike and the Oak Street Connector. Basic municipal services as police, fire, sewage treatment and garbage collection were improved. Working conditions and salaries of City employees were upgraded and qualifications were standardized with the introduction of Civil Service exams.

All changes and improvements were made within the means of the City's pocketbook. A study - New Sources in Revenue (1946-1949) - was conducted to explore new ways of increasing the City's treasury. A committee was appointed to revise the City Charter and the Health and Welfare Departments conducted a "self-study" (1951-1952). Following the war, the City had to cope with unemployment and housing shortage especially for veterans.

Celentano's defeat in 1953 was partly due to his unwillingness to overstrain the City's finances by increasing the work benefits for City employees or the tempo of the City's redevelopment. He was proud of the condition in which he left the City's finances in 1953 and throughout his administration strove to maintain a balance between the City's resources and expenditures.

The organization of the collection was determined by the original order, which is both chronological and by subject:

a. pre-mayoral years
b. mayoral years
c. "Health & Welfare Self-Study"
d. "New Source of Revenue"
e. charter
f. speeches and proclamations
g. engagements
h. election campaigns
i. post-mayoral years
j. appointment books
k. printed material
l. scrapbooks
m. photographs & memorabilia

Each of the major subdivisions is arranged first chronologically and then by subject which is also arranged chronologically, although some correspondence is arranged alphabetically and so indicated.

The mayoral years are divided into the four administrations, each of which is subdivided into the various city departments, agencies, bureaus, commissions as they are listed in the Manual of the City Government. The last category, "Mayor's Office," contains not only material pertaining to the mayor and his office but also that which does not fall into any of the previous categories.

There are two sets of appointment books. From their physical size and entries it appears that the large set was used in the office while the small set was a portable one. There are also two sets of scrapbooks - a set of small books, 18 vols., and a set of oversized books, 49 vols. - which contain labeled newspaper clippings not only from the two major city papers but also from papers of surrounding towns. The small-size set also contains some letters, programs, invitations, etc. Photographs were removed, placed into folders and so labeled. Photographs located through the collection were accumulated into one box. Photograph mats and plates; a movie of Eisenhower's campaign stop in N.H.; and a variety of memorabilia were grouped together - due to weight of the box it was placed on the oversize shelf.

The containers are numbered in Roman numerals. Within each container the folders are lettered consecutively in the center (II:C=box II: folder C). The title and subject matter appear in the upper left corner and the date, if given, in the right corner. Data added during processing appears in the lower right corner in pencil and is bracketed. (What appears as labeling in ink on the top of some documents was done by Mr. Tappan Wilder who had access to them prior to the donation of the papers to the Society.)

Some bound material and books were transferred to the library.
